

Yongmoon Kim

Researcher

Division of Risk Assessment, Korea Disease Control and Prevention Agency

Yongmoon Kim is researcher at Division of Risk Assessment, Korea Disease Control and Prevention Agency. He earned M.A. in sociology from the Korea University. He is interested in examining theory of action in fields of identity, media use, mental health, and epidemics. He also interested in measuring risk of self-injury and behavior addiction. Aligned with his research interest, he published quantitative research paper on case fatality rates of COVID-19 across 21 countries using panel data analysis, and qualitative research on meanings of wearing face masks during COVID-19 pandemic.